

Postal Cutbacks Are Ordered by Mr. Summerfield

By JACK ADAMS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Postmaster General Summerfield has ordered the postal service to prepare for drastic mail delivery reductions starting next Saturday.

Summerfield said yesterday the cutbacks will get under way at that time unless Congress, meanwhile, gives him 47 million dollars he contends is "necessary" to continue postal service at present levels for the remaining three months of the 1957 fiscal year.

Summerfield issued the instructions only a few hours after Chairman Cannon (D-Mo.) of the House Appropriations Committee told the House the postmaster general was pulling what Cannon called "an unadulterated bluff" in talking about reduced service, and that "they'll deliver the mail."

The Appropriations Committee earlier in the day had voted to give Summerfield 17 millions and to consider the remaining 30 millions next Friday. But at a news conference Summerfield described as "ridiculous" the committee decision to defer action on the additional allotment for a week.

The postal chief said he had planned to make some cutbacks today, but that it had been physically impossible to circulate the necessary orders through the field in time.

He announced "with great regret" that starting a week from today, all post offices will be closed on Saturdays and Sundays, and that there will be no mail deliveries, city, suburban or rural, on Saturdays except for items bearing special delivery postage. Saturday streetbox pickups will continue on Saturdays, but on limited Sunday schedules, he said.

Starting April 15, he said post offices will limit window service on week days to a maximum of 8 1/2 hours, and that on the same day business district deliveries will be limited calls further, for discontinuing issuance of money orders entirely at first and second class post offices of those serving larger communities. This would become effective April 29, and on that same date postal authorities would start suspension of third class mail service, except for shipments of medical supplies.

The third class service handles mail merchandise, merchandise sales and advertising matter.

Asked if he would resign if Congress turns down his money requests, Summerfield reportedly replied: "I have confidence common sense will prevail."

Four Killed by Weather in Georgia Area

ATLANTA (AP) — Gully-washing rain and vicious, erratic wind storms hit Georgia early today and last night, killed four persons, flattened homes and farm buildings and stalled a fast passenger train.

Hardest hit was the area around Ellaville, Oglethorpe and Montezuma, about 110 miles south of Atlanta. Two children were killed near Ellaville in Schley County and two in adjoining Macon County. At least 34 homes or barns were reported destroyed or badly damaged.

From this area, the storm apparently tore on northward, hit slipped down at Warner Robins, it slipped down windows and lifted a number of roofs. It also struck again between Jeffersonville, in Twiggs County, and Macon.

Across the state eastward in the Thomson-Autusta district, another bad blow took away porches and roofs, leveled a few buildings and uprooted numerous trees. Thomson was left without electric power for a considerable period.

Rainfall exceeding four inches in 24 hours in some localities sent streams rising to dangerous levels, flooded cellars, washed out county roads and small bridges.

Nursery Workers Are Needed

The local Arkansas Employment Service office has received a rush order for nursery workers. Able bodied men, ages 21 to 55, will be eligible for hire.

Teddy Jones, Employment Office Manager, advised that anyone interested in this work should contact the office here not later than noon, Monday, April 8.

Feels Israel to Be Allowed to Use Canal

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (AP) — U.N. Secretary General Dag Hammarskjöld indicates that he believes Egypt may let Israeli ships use the Suez Canal.

Hammarskjöld was asked at a news conference yesterday about President Eisenhower's statement earlier this week that "we should not assume that Egypt will violate the 1888 convention" by barring Israeli ships from the canal.

"I think it is a wise assumption," the secretary general replied.

Egypt, however, has given no public indication that its bar to Israeli shipping will be lowered. Egypt in the past has refused to let Israeli ships go through the canal on grounds that a technical state of war still exists between the two countries.

Hammarskjöld said he had no reply from Egypt to Israel's question whether Egypt still considers itself at war with Israel.

He also said neither Egypt nor Israel had replied to queries as to whether they were willing to reaffirm, as a "nonaggression pact," a provision of their 1949 Palestine armistice agreement against warlike acts.

Hammarskjöld expressed opposition to a Security Council debate on the Suez question at this time. He said he did not think it would be a good idea to call the council in on the issue of how to operate the canal until possibilities of current Washington-Cairo negotiations have been exhausted.

U. S. Ambassador Raymond Har conferred twice yesterday with Egyptian Foreign Minister Mahmoud Fawzi in Cairo on the canal problem. Har declined to comment on his talks, but the newspaper Al Akhbar reported the ambassador received a new communication from Washington concerning the canal operation plan Egypt circulated last week.

Hammarskjöld, who returned last week from a nine-day visit to Cairo, said he got full cooperation from Egyptian President Nasser and made "satisfactory" arrangements there for the U. N. Emergency Force. He declined to go into detail on any agreement reached with Egypt.

Asked to outline UNEF's precise role, the secretary general said that in the Gaza Strip it was to "safeguard peace" between Israel and Egypt.

At Sharmel Sheikh, the area commanding the entrance to the Gulf of Agaba through the Strait of Tiran, Hammarskjöld said the U. N. role was stated in his Jan. 24 report to the General Assembly. That report spoke of UNEF "assisting in maintaining quiet" pending decision on whether Egypt has the right to resume her blockade of Israeli shipping in the gulf.

Hammarskjöld added that he would be "happy" to see the breaking up of the UNEF arrangement "until a fundamental change in the Middle East situation removes the need for the force."

Jaycees Plan Youth Program During April

April has brought a busy schedule for members of the Hope Junior Chamber of Commerce. Recognizing the youth of the community and the problems that arise in finding interesting, worthwhile, and constructive activities, the Jaycees are sponsoring programs for practically all age groups this month.

An Easter Egg Hunt is planned for children up to and including the 6th grade on Easter Sunday afternoon at Fair Park from 2 p. m. to 3 p. m. Dub Flowers, Hunt Chairman, warns the search will begin promptly at 2 p. m. and to be there early.

April will also see the Jaycee Teen-Age Road-E-O, starting the 10th taking applications, and ending with driving performance tests Sunday afternoon April 28th, at the Airport. General Chairman Charles Gough will have more information for interested teen-age drivers soon.

The Junior American Legion Baseball Team is to be Co-sponsored by the Hope Jaycees, with the Jaycees furnishing management, coaching, transportation and road expenses for these boys from 15 to 17 years, that make up the team. Denville Ross, Jack Drake, W. H. Gunter, Jr., and Raymond Byers are heading the committee for this project.

These and several other public interest projects to come through the year will require funds, and the Jaycees plan to offer each resident of Hope an opportunity to participate in the projects and improve their property at the same time, thus receiving double value plus, through the purchase of a "Gismo."

Look carefully around the homes of Jaycees for a clue to the identity of "Gismo." The first person to properly identify the "Gismo" and call Dale Dunn at PR-7-3474 gets one free.

Teachers Meeting Over Arkansas

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Twelve hundred persons were expected to attend 19 district meetings of the Arkansas Education Association throughout the state today and election of new officers was on the agenda.

The delegates also planned to discuss benefits to school teachers as a result of the new tax program passed by the 61st General Assembly.

Candidates for president were Don Blackmon, superintendent of schools at Dell, and Imon Bruce, superintendent at Hot Springs.

Vice presidential candidates included R. K. Bent, professor of education at the University of Arkansas, and H. L. Minton, head of extension courses at Arkansas State Teachers College.

A recording secretary, two board members at large and board members for six districts also were to be named.

Knowland Silent on Suggestion He Resign Post

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON (AP) — A suggestion that Sen. Knowland (R-Calif.) resign before his term ends indicated some Republican uneasiness a California Senate seat in net years election.

Knowland was silent about a statement yesterday by California's GOP Gov. Goodwin J. Knight that it would be helpful if Knowland would step aside so another Republican could be appointed and enter the 1958 campaign as a Senate member.

Knowland, the Senate's Republican leader, has announced he will not seek re-election in 1958 but has left open the question of whether he might bid for the Republican nomination for governor as a step toward seeking the GOP presidential nomination in 1960.

Knight told a Sacramento, Calif., news conference he was "not advocating" that Knowland quit early. The governor said he has no plans to discuss the situation with Knowland on a forthcoming trip to Washington.

Whether Knowland quits before his term ends may depend on political developments in his home state. He has until about next January to decide whether he will run for governor. If he made that race and won his party's nomination in the state primary, Knowland might be willing to resign from the Senate before the election.

There seemed no possibility, however, that Knowland would quit with Congress still in session. He has made it clear he intends to retain the Republican leadership through this and next year's sessions.

Democrats meanwhile were strengthened in their belief that they have a chance of picking up a Senate seat in California where they top Republicans in voter registration.

Sen. Smathers of Florida, chairman of the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee, said California "definitely" is one of the states he believes the Democrats can win.

Southeast Is Lashed by Heavy Rains

By The Associated Press

Pounding rains and lashing winds hit the southeastern section of the nation today.

Downpours drenched the South Atlantic states in the latest outbreak in a five-day series of storms that have moved east across the country from the Rocky Mountains.

Vicious, erratic winds during the night struck Georgia today and during the night.

Two deaths were reported in Georgia. Hardest hit was the area around Ellaville, Oglethorpe and Montezuma, about 110 miles south of Atlanta.

A passenger train, the City of Miami, was stalled for several hours just south of Buena Vista, Ga., by a washout, but got going again by midnight.

Severe weather warnings were posted for the eastern sections of the Carolinas.

Mobile, Ala., has been doused by almost eight inches of rain this week—including a five-inch fall yesterday.

Rivers and streams swelled in western North Carolina, central Alabama and Georgia.

Rivers and streams also were on the rise in the Ohio Valley. Snow brought more weather woes to the northern tier of states. A 10-inch fall was reported at Phillipsburg, Pa., and half a foot at Danbury, Conn.

Light snow fell in the eastern reaches of the Great Plains and the Upper Mississippi Valley. But the U. S. Weather Bureau said the threat of local blizzard conditions and heavy snows is over in that region.

Ground blizzards hobbled travel in east-central Colorado and the southeastern corner of Wyoming.

The Washburn River spilled over its banks at Wabash, Ind., and water invaded the southwestern section of the city. More than 40 families left their homes.

Sections of some highways were under water in southern Illinois.

SMASHING WELCOME

SAN ANTONIO, (UP) — The Tidale family's new baby was given a smashing welcome at his birth.

John Tidale, 21, was driving to the hospital yesterday when his wife, in the back seat, told him the stock was arriving. Tidale looked back and smashed into a telephone pole. No one was hurt.

English Tried to Stop Beck Long Ago

By NORMAN WALKER

WASHINGTON (AP) — Everybody makes mistakes, but one of Dave Beck's worst was ignoring John F. English, a top fellow officer of the Giant Teamsters Union.

English is a 67-year-old Irishman who as a teen-age boy went to work guiding a horse-drawn dumper through the elegant Beacon Hill section of Boston.

As general secretary-treasurer of the Teamsters, English began to wonder what was happening to Teamsters funds long before the Senate Rackets Investigating Committee became interested in the Teamsters president.

Beck never paid too much attention to English, his No. 2 man in the Teamsters. He dealt with English's subordinates on money matters.

But back in 1955 English balked at the union's buying Beck's Seattle home for $100,000 and letting Beck continue to use it rent-free.

That didn't seem too sensible to English, a conservative and careful man. He gave in on the home purchase only after the union's entire executive board put an okay in writing.

Canadians Blame U. S. for Suicide

OTTAWA, Ont. (AP) — Canadian churchmen and labor groups joined political leaders of all parties today in condemning the U. S. Senate Internal Security subcommittee for airing charges of communism against Canadian diplomat Herbert Norman.

Norman, ambassador to Egypt, committed suicide yesterday by leaping from a building in Cairo. The subcommittee had published charges made before it that he had been a Communist. Canadian Foreign Secretary Lester B. Pearson said the charges were "beneath contempt," and that the Canadian government had investigated them in 1951 and held them unfounded.

Subcommittee leaders in a statement yesterday said they "would not be giving up to our obligations" if they omitted references to foreign nations in their investigations of communism in the United States. Norman was acting chief of the Canadian delegation to the U. N. in 1951.

The United Church of Canada, a merger of 21 Methodist, Presbyterian and Congregational denominations, in a statement by its secretary, Dr. Ernest E. Long, asked President Eisenhower and the U. S. Congress to call a halt to "assassinating the characters of innocent men."

The National Council of the United States should call on emergency meeting, the Long statement said, to prevent further such incidents. Charging the subcommittee had used "shocking and sadistic methods" in the statement said "fear, hysteria and unprincipled political ambition had caused the United States to go 'to far' in its security measures."

The Toronto and District Labor Council last night urged the Canadian Labor Congress to take steps to impress upon the U. S. government that "fundamental human rights and personal dignities of Canadian citizens and their diplomatic representatives must be respected."

Speakers at the meeting called the Senate subcommittee a "kangaroo court."

Donald Montgomery, Council secretary, said "it would be unfair to blame the American people as a whole for everything undesirable resulting from this separate subcommittee."

But a steelworkers delegate, Robert Sefton, declared "this attitude extends all the way through the American way of life."

At Wardsville, Ont., Mrs. Grace Wright, sister of Norman, declared, "They hounded him to death."

GOC to Start Red Cross Course Here

The Ground Observer Corps meets Tuesday at 7:30 at the VFW Hut. The session marks the start of a 20-hour Red Cross first aid course for members and prospective GOC members.

Classes will be under the supervision of firmen. It is hoped that enough interest will be shown to warrant an advanced Red Cross course in the future.

GOC Chairman Doug Jester announced the alert held Sunday, March 24, was very successful although during the bad weather only seven planes were spotted by the local post.

Ultimate aim of the GOC is to get a large part of Hope's population to take at least one hour's training. If this can be accomplished, success of the GOC unit here will be assured. Anyone willing to give just one hour for defense of the nation should call Mr. Jester.

Texas Owes Arkansas a Lot But Won't Admit It

By BRYCE B. MILLER

LITTLE ROCK (UP) It may be difficult for a Texan to believe, but there is evidence that Arkansas is the birthplace of the Lone Star State and the home state of several of Texas heroes.

Such staunch Texas patriots as Sam Houston, James Bowie, Stephen F. Austin and Davy Crockett all had well-founded Arkansas backgrounds.

Texas was conceived in the small Southwest Arkansas town of Washington in Hempstead county. The town, now little more than a wide spot on State Highway 4, has a population of 344.

Houston, Austin and other patriots planned the Texas revolution against Mexico in a small tavern in Washington. One historian relates that so many persons went into Houston's room at the tavern it was suspected he was running a gambling operation.

The first full meeting of the revolution, where the plans were revealed, was at the courthouse in Washington. And Washington became the center of the original recruiting activities for the first stages of that war.

Jim Bowie's famous knife was designed and manufactured by James Black, a Washington blacksmith, who was believed to have discovered the secret of the famous "Damascus steel. If he had it, it died with him.

Included among Austin's 300 Texas colonists, known as the "old three hundred," were many Arkansas families and numbers of individuals who had lived in Arkansas before joining the movement west.

Austin and his brother-in-law, James Bryan, platted the city of Little Rock, and were among the first proprietors of what is now the capital city of Arkansas. They also platted the town of Fulton.

Austin was appointed judge of the state's first judicial circuit and held court at Washington. Many students of Arkansas history believe Austin would have remained in the state if he had not been defeated for Congress in 1810.

Houston left his first wife in Tennessee, then joined a Cherokee Indian tribe in Pope County, Arkansas. When he arrived in Little Rock in May, 1829, he announced he intended to stay with the Indians the rest of his life. Later he married an Indian maiden, Tallich, the niece of the tribes chief. While a spokesman for the Indians in the nation's capital, he pointed with pride to his connections with the Arkansas Cherokees.

Davy Crockett was a familiar figure in Southwest Arkansas and still has descendants living in the state. His famous rifle, "Old bet," is stored in the vault of the state treasurer at Little Rock. Before his final trip into Texas, where he was killed at the Alamo, he and Dr. Isaac N. Jones, a frontier physician, traded watches. The doctor's watch, with its animal skin protective cover, was taken from Davy's body.

Dr. Jones, whose son, Dan W. Jones later became governor of Arkansas from 1897 to 1901, sent Davy's watch to his widow after the battle at the Alamo.

Arkansas is proud of the part it played in establishing Texas, and it was like a slap in the face for the state when an Arkansas representative was not allowed to tell of this part during a recent visit to Texas.

A member of the Arkansas Parks and Publicity Commission, Mrs. Betty Woods, was in Houston at a national sports show. She was invited to make a speech, but was told to submit an advance copy. Her remarks about Arkansas being the "cradle" of Texas were struck as being "derogatory."

It appeared unsuitable to her, but it was doubtful the commission would take issue with the censorship. During the past years, a constant interchange of good citizens and goodwill between the two states have brought them together, even in the eyes of the nation.

No longer is Arkansas referred to as an outlying state of Texas, since it has developed through the years that nothing can outlie Texas.

The charge against Worthy is a side issue, which was apparently brought up by the State Department for the purpose of diverting attention from the "basic issue," O'Mahoney told an interviewer.

"That issue is whether the American press is entitled to send its accredited representatives to any area of the world in which the interests of the American people are at stake."

Worthy said he did not serve any time in jail and "I never went to a conscientious objectors camp."

O'Mahoney said Worthy's statement "completely disposes of the allegation" and that Worthy's "reputation as a citizen is unsullied."

But Hruska said he would ask the subcommittee to obtain a full report of the Philadelphia court proceedings, to "set the record straight."

Senator Raps Action of State Dept.

By ERNEST B. VACCARO

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. O'Mahoney (D-Wyo.) accused the State Department today of raising "a side issue" to divert attention from its refusal to permit newsmen to enter Red China.

O'Mahoney said the department "owes an apology to Negro newsmen William Worthy for testimony the senator said was 'intended to show he had been jailed for refusing to go to a conscientious objectors camp' in World War II."

In Chicago, Worthy said he refused to go to a CO camp in 1943 on grounds there was racial discrimination in assignments to such camps. He said he never was prosecuted, but was classified 4-F because of an ulcer.

O'Mahoney is a member of a Senate Constitutional Rights subcommittee inquiring into the State Department's ban against Americans, including newsmen, entering Communist China.

Worthy, who works for the Baltimore Afro-American, defied that ban and visited Red China last year. Earlier this week, the department turned down his application for a new passport.

Yesterday, Robert Cartwright, acting director of the State Department's Bureau of Security and Consular Affairs, testified that a William Worthy pleaded guilty in Federal District Court at Philadelphia in 1944 to a charge of refusing to report to a conscientious objectors camp, served a day in jail and later went to the camp.

Sen. Hruska (R-Meb) said that did not fit with recent testimony of newsmen Worthy that he was classified 4-F and was never under any charge.

Reached in Chicago later, Worthy said he was classified as a conscientious objector in 1943 but refused to go to a CO camp because of racial discrimination in assignments to camps.

He said that there was no charge of "draft-dodging to revision" and that the Department of Justice dropped prosecution "rather than face a court test on the racial discrimination issue," and "after it learned I was eligible for a 4-F exemption for a duodenal ulcer."

Worthy said he did not serve any time in jail and "I never went to a conscientious objectors camp."

O'Mahoney said Worthy's statement "completely disposes of the allegation" and that Worthy's "reputation as a citizen is unsullied."

Education Value Cited by President

By MARVIN L. ARROWSMITH
WASHINGTON — President Eisenhower, stressing need for more classrooms, says America's schools are "more powerful even than the energy of the atom" and more important than guided missiles.

The President put it that way last night in a new appeal for congressional approval of the administration school construction program.

In an address at the centennial dinner of the National Education Assn. and to a nationwide radio audience, Eisenhower linked the school training of the nation's youth to the quest for enduring world peace.

"The hope of the world," he said, "is that wisdom can arrest conflict between brothers. I believe that war is the deadly harvest of arrogant and unreasoning minds."

"But the strength of America's arms, he said, always is related to the strength of the minds of its people."

"Our schools are strong points in our national defense," he said. "Our schools are more important than our Nike batteries, more necessary than our radar warning nets, and more powerful even than the energy of the atom."

This is true, if for no other reason than that modern weapons must be manned by highly educated personnel if they are to be effective, and the energy of the atom can only be understood and developed by the most highly trained minds in the country."

The President's audience of about 1,200 educators listened in solemn silence during his 15-minute talk, but gave him a big ovation when he was introduced and at the conclusion.

Eisenhower sounded his new appeal for action a few hours after the first step in Congress toward easing the classroom shortage.

A House Education subcommittee yesterday approved a bill to authorize a five-year, two-billion-dollar program of federal grants to help the states build schools.

The bill, scheduled to go before the full committee next Thursday, is a compromise between the administration plan for a four-year $1,300,000,000 program and a suggestion by Democrats for a six-year, 3.6, program.

Iran Police Shoot Down Bandit Slayers

TEHRAN, Iran (UP) — Iranian federal police announced today that the slayer of Mrs. Anita Carroll was one of the Dad Shah bandits killed in a gun battle with loyal tribesmen in Baluchistan Monday.

But the leader of the bandits, the legendary Baluchistan badman known as Dad Shah, apparently had escaped a police net with most of his gang and now may be hiding out in Pakistan.

A government official announced that Dad Shah's brother-in-law Ghader Dad has been identified as the gunman who shot pretty Mrs. Carroll on March 24, shortly after the gang killed her husband, another American and two Iranian employees of the American Point Four program in Iran.

Ghader Dad and two other bandits were killed Monday in a skirmish with a posse of loyal tribesmen armed by the government for the Dad Shah manhunt.

Despite this early success against the killers, the Dad Shah incident sparked a long-brewing government crisis that brought about the resignation of Premier Hussein Ala.

Rain and floods which complicated the borderland manhunt, apparently had cut off a number of the Americans who had joined Iranian police and tribesmen in the search for the killers.

One of the Americans believed cut off in the region 80 miles southeast of Tehran is Lt. Col. William Webb, of Oklahoma City, Okla., a survivor of the Bataan death march in World War II. He is attached to the U. S. military mission in Tehran.

The Americans were not believed in any danger. Officials said the floods or landslides probably had prevented them from contacting search headquarters at Zahedan.

RELUCTANTLY ACCEPTS HOLLYWOOD (UP) — Film maker Mervyn L. Roy finally persuaded Air Force Master Sergeant Albert Williams to accept a part in the Time for Sergeants, a film in which Williams is technical adviser.

Williams reluctantly accepted a role of a corporal.

an attack on Formosa itself. Knowland wanted this country to blockade the Red China coast to bring about the release of captured American fliers and to serve an ultimatum on the Red Chinese, backed by "effective action," if they were not released.

He got neither wish. Eisenhower said such a blockade would be an act of war. And Eisenhower left him talking to himself when he one time called to a diplomatic break with Russia.

In 1954 he was so displeased with the Eisenhower-Dulles handling of foreign policy that he called for a congressional review of it. And he voted for the final version of the Bricker Amendment, opposed by Eisenhower, which would limit the President's treaty-making powers.

News From State Capitol

State Capital Bureau

LITTLE ROCK, April 3, Special
This comes from interviews with dues-paying members of a half dozen labor unions, five AFL and one CIO. They confess to uneasiness over recent developments in Arkansas and Washington.

The plight of International Teamsters Union President Dave Beck has them worried because the Teamsters Union Little Rock local president is also head of the Arkansas AFL-CIO federated Council formed at the time of the merger of the labor groups.

Odell Smith has bossed the Teamsters Union hereabouts ever since it became an important factor in the economic life of the community and state under impetus generated by government contracts during World War II. Operating at first in a modest office in an outmoded building, Smith collected application fees and dues from thousands of job applicants who were referred to him by government officials or contractors.

When the war was over, the Teamsters Union was rolling in money, and Smith ranked with the more prosperous citizens. He turned his attention to local firms when the governments big build program was curtailed. Sometimes a business chooses to resist. Terry Dairy Products Co. wouldn't agree to his terms two years ago.

A strike with attendant violence, including dynamites never solved by law enforcement officers, resulted, and eventually the Terry company sold out to a competitor. When a demand for a grand jury inquiry began to attract attention he public learned that Smith had been one of the jury commissioners who chose the grand jury panel and that one of his assistants, the secretary of the union, was a member of the jury.

The latter resigned after it became apparent that, if he didn't, Judge William J. Kirby was going to ask for his resignation.

Smith has made politics his business, too. He backed Orval E. Faubus for governor in 1954, and was rewarded with an appointment to the Board of Review, as labor's representative. This board, with two other members, one presumably acting for the public and one for management, handles appeals from administrative decisions of the Employment Security Division that are channeled through appeals tribunals.

At the 1956 National Democratic Convention, Smith was one of the Arkansas delegates. His political activities last year also included an all-out effort in Governor Faubus's campaign and an unsuccessful try at defeating Pulaski County Senator Ellis M. Fagan. It was a near miss, though, and undoubtedly strengthened labor's bargaining power with politicians.

Smith isn't committing himself one way or the other on Dave Beck and other Teamsters officers who are in trouble with Senator McClellan subcommittee at the moment, but an associate was quoted in newspapers as casting aspersions at the Arkansas senators motives. Other organized labor officials confided they wished such aspersions were not emanating from within their circle.

Smith took a big hand in the campaign of former Gov. Sidney McMath against Senator McClellan in 1954, and it would be only natural for the senator to be curious about how much money labor unions spent that year in seeking to "liquidate him. So far the only information that has reached the public has come from official reports to Congress showing the principal beneficiaries among labor-backed candidates for whom contributions were made by union committees.

But Arkansas's possible involvement in the Beck controversy isn't all that has caused thoughtful union members to feel somewhat letdown. Despite having a "friendly" governor who only acknowledged his obligation to organized labor, they found themselves forced to fall back on the freedom to work amendment, which forbids a closed shop in Arkansas, to void an act passed this year to prohibit union membership for city policemen.

Governor Faubus knew when he signed the bill that Attorney General Bruce Bennett would have to hold it unconstitutional, under the amendment which labor leaders have denounced as unfair to unions; but by signing it the governor sewed up some votes in the legislature for the three percent sales tax.

And that's something else about which the labor people aren't happy. They cannot escape the fact that the sales tax hits the wage earner hardest, yet their lobby acquiesced in the 50 percent increase.

Against these cuts was not the first they have waged for Eisenhower against his own Republicans. One of them, Rep. John B. Fogarty of Rhode Island, taunted the Republicans.

He reminded them that when they were seeking election themselves in last fall's campaign, they were anxious to have their pictures taken with the popular Eisenhower.

"You were not disclaiming his leadership then," Fogarty said. "You were telling people you were part of his team."

"All I'm trying to do is make you live up to the promises made by you and your party in the last campaign," when you promised to support President Eisenhower and his program.

Dulles Master at Changing Words

By JAMES MARLOW Associated Press News Analyst

WASHINGTON — The best way for a newsman to be sure he knows what Secretary of State Dulles means to say is to get it in writing.

Dulles' stenographers take down every word he says at a news conference, type it, and give him a copy. He then edits and changes his words to suit himself.

Thus newsmen who heard him say one thing sometimes read, in the transcript of his remarks, that he said something else. This happened again at yesterday's conference.

He told newsmen Dag Hammarskjold, United Nations secretary general, had made substantial progress in his talks with Egyptian President Nasser.

For some reason Dulles had second thoughts and decided to soften the progress angle. In the transcript he changed substantial progress to "some progress."

This practice brought him into stiff argument with newsmen last fall when, at his Oct. 2, 1956, news conference, he was asked about a reported split between the United States and its British and French allies.

He said "there is some difference." This language put the difference in the present tense, giving it the appearance of something still going on.

But he edited to put the difference in the past tense by knocking out the verb "is" and saying "there has been some difference."

He also spoke of some differences on "fundamental things" but in the transcript changed this to have him saying "our approach is not always identical."

At his next conference, Oct. 16, newsmen objected to this editing job, asked him to let the transcript quote him on the language he had actually used.

He said: "No. I must reserve the right in case I make a blunder inadvertently which does damage to international relations to correct those blunders."

Reporters who get exclusive interviews with Dulles — such as two reporters from Time and Life magazines have had in the past 16 months — might have less worry about corrections later if they had Dulles read and correct their copy before they publish it.

In January 1956, Life magazine carried a piece on Dulles by James Shepley. I was based on a personal interview with Dulles and caused a storm in the capital.

Shepley quoted Dulles as saying, "The ability to get to the verge of war without getting into the war is the necessary art." This statement, now famous, became known among Dulles critics as the "art of brinkmanship."

Did Dulles really say what Shepley said he did? Dulles was asked at a news conference. He didn't deny it, exactly. He said the quotation was "substantially accurate but 'I would never myself have expressed myself in quite that way for publication.'"

Dulles also explained he had not reviewed this highly laudatory article by Shepley.

Now another Time man — its diplomatic reporter, John Robinson Jack Beal — has written a whole biography on Dulles, also highly laudatory.

Although the book was not published until today, other reporters got advance copies of it and at yesterday's news conference asked Dulles about two Beal statements which raised eyebrows in Washington, particularly in Congress.

Beal, who had personal interviews with Dulles, said the secretary's withdrawal last year of aid for Nasser's Aswan dam was intended to expose Russia — which had talked of aid to Egypt and was now free to make good — as a phony.

Beal also said President Eisenhower had sent Nationalist Chinese President Chiang Kai-shek a "secret, personal letter" satisfying him that the United States would help defend "the islands of Quemoy and Matsu off the Red China coast."

Dulles threw down both statements. He said his withdrawal of aid for Egypt was not an attempt to force a Middle East showdown with Russia, and he said the country had made no flat commitment to defend Quemoy and Matsu.

DOROTHY DIX

Poll Other Parents on Dating Question

Dear Dorothy Dix: I'm a girl of 15, an orphan, and have been raised by an aunt and uncle. My foster parents and I never had a difference of opinion until the question of dating arose. My boy friend is a year older than I, the son of family friends. My aunt has no objection to him but she doesn't want me to date yet.

All the kids at school travel in pairs. I've been well instructed in the facts of life, so there's no cause for worry about my possible behavior. How can I get these thoughts over to my aunt and uncle?

Dear Ginny: Your aunt and uncle certainly have done an admirable job of raising you, which I am glad to see you realize and appreciate. They are conscientious people with a full realization of the obligation to which they have been entrusted.

Ask your aunt if she'll bring up the dating question with other parents. When she realizes that most parents approve of, and even encourage, their young daughters' teen-age social life, the picture will change for you.

You have an obligation, too. Never violate the trust given you take the folks into your confidence, be open about your dating. See that you deserve the co-operation you want.

Dear Dorothy Dix: Last year I met a young man in the Army, who was stationed near my home. He proposed before his discharge in October. Soon after his return home, I learned he was married. I was furious and wrote a letter telling him off. He replied with a very sweet explanation, saying he hasn't lived with his wife for some time and was in the process of a divorce. From then on he wrote faithfully.

I'm not the type to chase after a married man and would like to give him up, but I really do love him.

Arabella: There can be no question of your "giving him up." He never was yours! This divorce gag is the number one masculine myth. Don't join the army of sorry girls who have fallen for it. Be smart!

Dear Dorothy Dix: My best girl friend has everything — looks, clothes, personality, intelligence and charm. She has recently become engaged to a boy who has no personality, very little education and few friends. I feel she has sympathy for the boy, not love. How can I help her?

DEBORAH: Interference in a case like this will rarely be taken kindly. Hope that this is a rare case of true love, and stick around to give comfort if it isn't.

Jack Webb Is Now Boosting
Marine Corps

By BOB THOMAS
HOLLYWOOD — Jack Webb is still sergeant, but he has switched his allegiance from the Los Angeles Police Department to the United States Marine Corps.

It's T. Sgt. Jim Moore instead of Sgt. Joe Friday for the industrious Webb, who has just finished producing, directing and starring in "The D. I." That stands for drill instructor.

Instead of the soft-spoken, monotoned police detective of television, Webb is about as noisy as he could be.

"Man, it took a lot of me," he sighed in his sumptuous office at Mark VII Productions. "We got tape recordings of seven hours of drill commands made at Fortis Island. This was boiled down to a 4½-hour tape and I listened to all of it."

"Those D. I.'s really have to yell to make themselves heard. After the first few days of doing it in the picture, my belly was really sore at night from straining my diaphragm so much. One day my voice really did come out on me, and I was afraid we'd have to suspend shooting. But fortunately it came back."

Webb has long been a man in a hurry, but his schedule on "The D. I." was a man-killer. He lost

American TV Films Now Going Global

By CHARLES MERCER

NEW YORK — American television films are going global.

In Great Britain, 4 of the 10 top audience-rated programs during December were American packages. They were Dragnet, Assignment Foreign Legion, The $64,000 Question (with neither a dollar nor a pound sterling sign), and Robin Hood (though filmed in England this is American written and planned).

The export of American TV film is becoming a big business. The president of one of the most active exporting firms, Milton A. Gordon of Television Program 1 America, Inc., reported the other day that in one year TPA has grossed $2,700,000 on 12 different series in many countries.

What sort of American television film program do foreign viewers enjoy most? Gordon and Manny Reiner, in charge of TPA foreign distribution came up with these general conclusions:

In Europe, action and costume adventure series rate as the most popular. The least popular are musicals. American comedies, especially if they have any pretensions to sophistication, also are not usually popular.

In Latin America the same general patterns prevail, with especially strong resistance to any form of "drawing room" drama. The most popular single TPA program in Latin America, by the way, is Lassie, who barks in nearly every country south of the border where there is television.

Gordon pointed out that there are basic economic factors involved in the sale of American television films abroad. Every country wants to develop its own TV industry to as great an extent as possible, but in no other country are there the economic resources of the American industry.

Thus, the general difficulty of selling a series of indoor drama is based on the fact that it is costly produced in any country. But only America can produce for one example, Western action dramas with panoramic backdrops.

She began with the days when Alexander Larg arrived as a young soldier of fortune, and took service under the Bey.

But the time came at last when the Bey became jealous of his growing power and riches; and it was at this time, said the old lady, that his relations in Scotland had refused to help him. He had had to seek support elsewhere, and with the help of other dissidents on the coast had established himself independently of the Bey on the island of Seknou.

So he lived for more than 30 years, autocratic, ruthless and independent, fabulously rich and very old, but his downfall came when, not content with refusing to acknowledge the overlordship of the Bey, he actively helped the Khoumris in one of their many risings, supporting them with ships, men and money. The Bey's grandson of his first master broke off all his other activities to concentrate against him, and in 1751 he was overwhelmed. He was then 82, but he was seen in the last defense of the Bordj el Agareb laying about him as stoutly as the young Iskander Larg of 60 years before. Yet when the Bey's troops, regardless of loss, swarmed up the walls on ladders and battered down the door.

How Al Merhametsiz got out of the Bordj was a secret, known only to the head of the family, and passed on to the heir at the death. "My mother says that I shall learn it one day," charges that he took $322,000 in Teaster cash for his own use. But the executive board is an apparent revolt approved only a limited fund to fight "anti-labor legislation."

However, the magazine — headed by Editor Beck — was crammed with special features about President Beck and his Fifth Amendment stand before the Rackets Committee. The magazine's glossy cover listed the titles of the Bill of Rights.

Inside, a "letter" from Beck to the unions members: "—Implied that the Senate investigation is part of a 'leave campaign' designed to 'drive union members away from their unions and thereby achieve a situation whereby a reactionary group of management can cut back on labor costs.'"

—Boasted that wage increases for the "average Teamsters Union member has far outstripped increases for other workers since December, 1952, 'when I took office.'"

Beck has already announced he will run for re-election despite the Senate charges. "The Teamsters will hold their first national election since 1952 in September. By that time, Beck could be running against an AFL-CIO demand for his ouster."

The figure sitting bolt upright in the gold throne chair was less a Queen Victoria than a Boadicea. Never had Allan seen such a formidable woman. Her pure white hair was crowned by an enormous and incongruous touque, such as Queen Mary used to wear; and Allan supposed, both then and after, that she had adopted it in deliberate imitation because she associated it with the fullest dignity of queenship.

She must have been something over 70. Her complexion was olive. She had the nose and lips of Kaid, thought Allan, but the resemblance was not remarkable, as in the case of Georges. She was generously built, but not fat; her gray hair dress hung about her gracefully enough. Her two hands gripped the arms of her chair as if trying their strength. Her eyes, although as blue as Allan's own, were cold and piercing, and highly appropriate to the descendant of one whose byname was "The Pitiless."

He stepped boldly forward, and said in a casual voice to Camille: "Will you be good enough to interpret for me? — Madame, I am ashamed that the two branches of the family of Larg should have been separated for so long, but proud that it should be given to me to be the first to come to Seknou after so many years."

Camille interrupted, and she replied in a slow, deep, deliberate voice, which he translated phrase by phrase.

"My mother says that it is indeed a long time, but that she is glad to see the head of the house of Larg here at last. . . Her father long cherished a wish to go to Scotland, but the times were not propitious, and he died without accomplishing his wish. . . It has always been the tradition of our family to follow with interest from afar the lives and fortunes of the house of Larg in Scotland. . . We grieved here at the news of the death on the battlefield of the late head of the family, your cousin Kenneth. . . My mother hopes that in the new times ahead of us the two streams of the family of Larg may flow again together, and that the old breach may be healed. . . The quarrel was not of our making; and now that you have come to us at this historic moment, it shall be as though it had never been."

"Larg will always be open to any member of your family that will come and pay us a visit," he said — and pictured the reaction of Aymer Kennedy as he spoke. "A picture of Al Merhametsiz as a young man hangs in an honored place. . . (Must get him down off the stairs, thought Allan, if they ever do look like coming.)"

She began with the days when Alexander Larg arrived as a young soldier of fortune, and took service under the Bey.

But the time came at last when the Bey became jealous of his growing power and riches; and it was at this time, said the old lady, that his relations in Scotland had refused to help him.
